Rolex Grand Slam:

The Rolex Grand Slam of Show Jumping unites the Majors in Aachen (GER), Geneva (SUI), Calgary (CAN) and 's-Hertogenbosch (NED) in the challenge for the most prestigious and most difficult-to-win trophy on the international equestrian sport circuit. The rider, who triumphs at three shows in succession, wins the Rolex Grand Slam of Show Jumping – together with one million Euros on top of the prize-money.

Should a rider win the fourth Major in direct succession after claiming the Grand Slam victory, he doubles his Grand Slam bonus up to two million Euros. Two Major victories within a Grand Slam cycle are rewarded with 500,000 Euros if the victories occur at two consecutive legs of the Grand Slam. Irrespective of the calendar year, each rider's personal Grand Slam cycle begins individually with his first Major victory. Scott Brash from Great Britain went down in history as the first and only winner of the Grand Slam to date: He won in Geneva in 2014 as well as in Aachen and Calgary in 2015.
